neh has been of but short duration, the last dispatches from the seat of war bringing the news of the downtall of Khartoum and the probable destruction of Gen. Gordon and his army. The accounts so far are exceedingly meager, and there are many conflicting rumors as to the fate of Gordon, although the capture of the city by El Mahdi is beyond peradveture. The first intelligence of the disaster reached Gen. Wolselev by a foot messenger, who escaped from the city when the rebel troops entered, but no particulars were received. It is believed that the Mahdi got into the city by the treachery of one Faraz Pasha, who, left in charge of the ramparts on Jan. 26, opened the gates and let in the enemy. Another rumor has it that Gordon, knowing of Stewart's advance, sent a large part of his force out of the city to meet him, and this fact coming to the knowledge of El Mahdi, he promptly attacked the town, which, weakened as it was, fell an easy prey to his large army. One dispatch states that over 2,000 men were butchered by the rebel troops after the surrender of the city. It is the general belief that Gen. Gordon has been killed, although all manner of stories are affoat in regard to him. One messenger stated that he was seen after the surrender wearing the Mahdi's uniform; another, that he is cooped up in the citadel; while still another claims that he is a prisoner. If the latter report is true there can be little apprehension as to his personal safety, and his relief will only be a matter of time and money.

Whatever may be the extent of the disaster. there can be no doubt of the serious effect it will have on the British operations in the Soudan. Already many tribes which professed friendship to the British have thrown off their disguise and openly declared for the Mahdi, to whose standard they are flocking by the thousands. trade of the Soudan is estimated as high as $20,000,000 annually, and employs several thousand merchants and their dependents. The sending of Gordon had for its object the carrying out of this Liberal program. His scheme was, as soon as it could possibly be done, to hand the control of the country over to the chiefs of the various tribes, who should resume the Government of their predecessors which had been distributed by the conquests of Mehemet Ali. To this end Gordon entered into negotiations with the Mahdi, and would, if satisfactory arrangements could have been made, have aided him in establishing a certain amount of authority over the country. The Mahdi, however, refused to meet these advances in the spirit in which they were intended, and his in the bloody ciothes of his victim .- A crazy | conduct finally compelled Gordon to assume the offensive against him with such troops, Egyptian and Arab, as he could put in the field, and had a fare share of success. When the day began to go against Gordon it was the plain duty of the English to extricate him from the position in which he had been placed by other houses. Both addressed the crowd acknowledg. sary for the purpose of relieving Gordon and Stewart, and retire from there as soon as consistent with the exigencies of the military situation. The campaign has been severely criticised, and there seems to be good ground for it. There has been a most unaccountable delay in moving. His enemies assert that this is due to inefficiency; and especial condemination is laid upon his waiting to secure the services of a corps of Canadian boatmen, whom he had found successful in his Red River campaign. While he waited Col. Stewart was deployed ashore and massacred, so that this part of his mission was brought to an end, and it seems that the other in regard to Gordon has terminated similarly unfortunately. It will now require some ex-ceedingly brilliant achievements to set Gen. Wolseley right before the eyes of the English people.

> WEDNESDAY, Feb. 4.—The Chair laid before the Senate the President's message relating to Mrs. Grant's offer to the Government of the swords and other military and civil testimonials lately belonging to Gen. The Inter-State Commerce Bill was then taken up and passed by a vote of 43 to 12. The bill for the retirement and recoinage of the trade dollar was discussed until the adjournment. In the House Mr. Mutchler, from the Committee on Civil Service Reform, reported adversely a bill probibiting the removal of Union soldiers in the civil service except for cause. Mr. Money, from the Committee on Post-Offices, reported a bill to reduce postage on mailable matter of the second class. It provides that the postage on publications of the second class, when sent by the publishers to bona fide subscribers, shall be one cent a pound or fraction thereof. THURSDAY, Feb. 5 .- Among the bills introduced in the Senate was one by Mr. Sherman

FRIDAY, Feb. 6.—In the Senate, a resolution was offered by Mr. Sewell, calling on the Secreplans or preparations had been matured by the Engineer Corps of the Army or by the War Department for defending the harbors on our seacoast and lakes, by torpedoes or otherwise, in case of sudden war with any foreign power; and if torpedo stations have been established or are contemplated for such defense, then whether any armament has been provided or plan devised for the protection of such torpedo stations.

The Chair also laid before the Senate the anti-silver coinage bill, but without further action the Senate, on motion of Mr. Morrill, at 5 p. m. went into executive session, and at 5:15 adjourned.

In the House the River and Harbor Bill was discussed until the recess, after which, at the evening session, 26 pension bills, including one granting a pension of $10 each to the minor children of the late Lieut. Kislingbury, and one increasing to $50 the pension of the widow of Commodore Fillebrown, were passed.

Mr. Van Wyck moved an amendment to one of the private pension bills, providing that all soldiers' widows or minor children who, by existing law, are or may be entitled to $8 a month, shall in future receive $12.

Mr. Van Wyck explained that the was the same as that which the Senate had put in the Mexican Pension Bill. There seemed to be no other chance, Mr. Van Wyck said, to get justice done to a large number of deserving people, who were now receiving the pittance of $8 a month. Mr. Blair thought the amendment might defeat the Mexican Pension Bill. Mr. Van Wyck said it was already substantially defeated. Neither the Mexican soldiers or any others would receive anything from the House before the 4th of March. Mr. Van Wyck's amendment was agreed toyeas 37, nays 12. Mr. Mitchell moved to add to the bill further provisions of the Mexican Pension Bill namely: First, that in considering the cases of dependent parents it shall be sufficient to show that such parents are without other means of comfortable support than their own manual labor or contributions from persons not legally bound for their support; second, that proof that the applicant was regularly mustered into service shall be presumptive evidence of soundness at the time, but subject to rebuttal; and third, that no person shall be entitled to more than one pension at a time unless especially declared by act of Congress.

These amendments were agreed to-yeas 30, navs 17. In the House the session was devoted to the discussion of the River and Harbor Bill. SATURDAY, Feb. 7.-Mr. Sherman, from the Committee on the Library, reported a joint resolution accepting the offer made to the Government by Wm. H. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Grant of the swords, medals, bronzes, paintings and other articles of value presented to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant by the various Governments of the world as tokens of appreciation of his illustrious character as a soldier and statesman. The resolution expressed the thanks of Congress to Mr. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Grant, and provides that the articles be placed in the charge of the Librarian of Congress, the Secretary of War, however, to receive them for safe keeping until a proper repository may be provided for them in the Congressional Library. The joint reso-

A True History of the Most Thrilling and Romantic Secret Service of the Late War. By REV. WILLIAM PITTENGER,

One of the actors in the strange scenes described, and now a Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ILLUSTRATED WITH PORTRAITS AND WOOD-CUTS.

"The mode of operation proposed was to reach a point on the road where they could seize a locomotive and train of cars, and then dash back in the direction of Chattanooga, cutting the telegraph wires and burning the bridges behind them as they advanced, until they reached their own lines."

"The twenty-two captives, when secured, were thrust into the negro fall of Chattanooga. They occupied a single room, half under ground, and but thirteen feet square, so that there was not space enough for them all to lie down together, and a part of them were, in consequence, obliged to sleep sitting and leaning against the walls. The only entrance was through a trap-door in the celling, that was raised twice a day to let down their scanty meals, which were lowered in a bucket. They had no other light or ventilation than that which came through two small triple-grated windows. They were covered with swarming vermin, and the heat was so oppressive that they were often obliged to strip themselves entirely of their clothes to bear it. Add to this, they were all handcuffed, and, with trace-chains secured around their necks by padlocks, were fastened to each other in companies of twos and threes. Their food, which was doled out to them twice a day, consisted of a little flour wet with water and baked in the form of bread, and spoiled pickled beef. They had no opportunity of procuring supplies from the outside, nor had they any means of doing so,—their pockets having been rifled of their last cent by the Confederate authorities, prominent among whom was a rebel officer wearing the uniform of a major. No part of the money thus basely taken was ever returned." EXTRACTS FROM OFFICIAL REPORTS:

Eight Thousand Copies of Capturing a Locomotive have already been sold, and the demand still is for "more." It is handsomely Bound in Cloth, printed in Large, Clear type, making 250 pages of reading matter and Thirteen full-page Illustrations.
